MCM Among Washington's Top 75 Corporate Philanthropists

Seattle, Wash. – The Puget Sound Business Journal has recognized MCM as one of the Top 75 Corporate Philanthropists of 2013. This is the fourth consecutive year MCM has received such recognition, awarded to firms who demonstrate significant commitment to the nonprofit community through overall giving and a culture of corporate philanthropy.

MCM's corporate giving extends to a wide range of organizations, including United Way of King County, Atlantic Street Center, Make-A-Wish Foundation, Zion Preparatory Academy, Seattle Children's Foundation, Seattle Symphony, and the University of Washington.

"All of us at MCM share a commitment to giving back to the community," said Chief Executive Officer Steve White. "It is an honor to be recognized for our contributions, and to be in the company of such an outstanding group of organizations."

Under the leadership of founder John Meisenbach, MCM has grown to become one of the largest privately held benefits consulting and insurance brokerage firms in the Northwest. MCM delivers a wide range of services, including employee benefits, retirement plans, executive benefits, and property & casualty insurance consulting for individuals and businesses.
