Property and Casualty Leader Doug Darlington Joins MCM as Partner

Seattle, WASH, January 3, 2012 – A recognized leader in the region’s property and casualty insurance market, Doug Darlington has joined MCM, one of the Northwest’s leading privately-held benefits consulting and insurance brokerage firms, as a partner.

A 25-year industry veteran, Darlington has specialized in substantial risk management cases and is a notable expert in the agricultural industry, among other markets. He most recently served as a senior vice president at Kibble & Prentice. As a partner at MCM, he will oversee new business development for the property and casualty division while driving cross departmental opportunities for MCM.

“Doug is well known and highly respected in our industry,” said MCM president, John Meisenbach. “His years of experience and history with large national firms gives him the ideal credentials to help drive sustainable growth for our business and to serve as a mentor to MCM’s talented team.”

MCM serves some of the Northwest’s most influential high net worth individuals, as well as a range of local and multinational companies. The firm was honored as the leading small business in corporate citizenship and philanthropy last year by the Puget Sound Business Journal and has been named one of the best places to work by Seattle Business.

*Founded in 1961 by noted business leader and philanthropist John Meisenbach, MCM delivers employee benefits, executive benefits, retirement plans, insurance advisory and property and casualty insurance to high net worth individuals and a wide range of businesses.
